

September 2009

EAT, DRINK & BE MERRY!

We may deal with serious stuff at work every day but GMPians definitely know how to have fun

GMP - Staffing professionals by day, boisterous, fun-loving professionals by night

All work and no play make Jack a dull boy. So on the evening of September 25th, GMPians were ushered onboard a chartered bus to a cosy pub along a quiet street in Tanjong Pagar where a madcap evening of events and rambunctious activities unfolded behind closed doors.

A night of fun and unwinding after a long hard week at work aside, the evening helped to forge closer camaraderie between GMPians as well as heartily welcome the newest additions to the company.

The evening kicked off with a brief round of games to get the party started. Divided into eight teams, GMPians were bellowing group cheers at the top of their voices and madly scrambling about to assemble the longest chain of belts.

GMP Models showing off the creation of their fashion designer-teammates while dancing

A segment of the evening's programme had teams playing fashion designer as they raced to dress up one of their comrades in outfits out of trash-bags, old newspapers, straws, string and rolls of toilet paper.

Add ingenuity and over-the-top hysterics and you get a hilarious mix of models and outfits - from cross-dressing models in cleverly improvised bikini tops stuffed with large wads of newspaper, to beauty queens with straw crowns and makeshift sceptres.

The main highlight of the evening was the 'GMP Idol' competition - a karaoke contest in three rounds where each team sent up their best singers to flex their vocal chords. While some of our contestants wooed the crowd with their dulcet voices and husky timbres, others decided to make up for their lack of vocal prowess with comical showmanship and on-stage antics which had members of the audience in stitches.

The night culminated in a sing-off of the final three of GMP Idol, with the winner determined by the loudest cheers received from his or her "fans".

The GMP Idol showed you didn't need a good voice to win