

WORK AND LIFE IN PERFECT HARMONY

As one of GMP's longest serving staff, Eve Lim knows how challenging it is to be able to divide time between work and family. And being a medium sized enterprise and trying to develop a business requires dedication, determination and sometimes, long hours at work.

Management support is crucial. Studies have shown that employees who worry less in their personal lives are more likely to be engaged and productive at work. Work life balance plays a part in attracting and retaining key talent as well.

Acknowledging the demanding industry she is in, Eve appreciates the pro-family values and work-life balance GMP advocates. While working with GMP, she had the chance to start a family and is now a proud parent to two children.

She is also grateful for support from the management balancing her career and family, which has not undermined her talents.

Despite only having a degree in business administration, she was exposed to a range of industries such as banking and finance and industrial services. Taking on diverse portfolios has helped her gain insight into the different fields and provided her with opportunities to grow professionally. Her unwavering effort and positive attitude has also served her well in her development.

Today, Eve is one of the directors and heads several divisions which include GMP Banking, GMP Technologies and GMP Consultancy.

“The understanding management and growth opportunities that I have here are enough to keep me growing with the organisation. There is no push factor for me to leave.”
