RECRUITMENT AGENCY RECEIVES WORK LIFE AWARD

Singapore, 27 August 2010 – One of Singapore’s leading recruitment agency and HR consultancy, The GMP Group, was conferred the Work-Life Achiever Award at the Work Life Excellence 2010 for excellence in work life practices.

The Work-Life Achiever award, is a subsidiary award to the Work-Life Excellence (WLE) Award , and is presented to companies recognised for their work life strategies but did not receive the WLE Award.

GMP was praised for its efforts in empowering all its employees to be involved in the planning process for Work-Life programmes. This approach allows employees to feel a sense of ownership and interest towards work-life initiatives while meeting both organisational goals and employee needs. As such GMP has adopted flexible work arrangements and organised workplace health activities (including yoga and pilates) and free health screenings.

“Many are under the impression that implementing Work-Life Harmony initiatives involves extensive resources, and that only larger companies can afford it,” said Josh Goh, assistant director, corporate services at The GMP Group on the receiving the award. “However, the size of a company does not determine the success of its Work-Life programmes. A mindset is crucial in adopting a culture of Work-Life Harmony. GMP has shown that SMEs can excel in Work-Life Harmony as well.”

The Work Life Excellence Award recognises companies’ efforts in work-life policies that successfully maximise employee performance while assisting them to manage their professional duties and personal responsibilities. It also encourages Singapore employers to put into practice work-life strategies.
